LOGLINE
THE AGE OF LOVE follows the comic and poignant adventures of 30 seniors who attend a first-of-its-kind Speed Dating event for 70- to 90-year-olds, and discover how the search for love changes—or doesn’t change—from first love to the far reaches of life.

SHORT SYNOPSIS
An unprecedented speed dating event for 70- to 90-year-olds serves as the backdrop for THE AGE OF LOVE, an alternately poignant and funny look at the search for love among the senior set.

Over one summer, we intimately follow as ten speed daters—recently widowed, long-divorced or never-married—prepare for the big day, endure a rush of encounters, then anxiously receive their results. Fearlessly candid about themselves and what they’re seeking, these WWII babies are spurred to take stock of life-worn bodies and still-hopeful hearts.

Then, as they head out on dates that result, comic and bittersweet moments reveal how worries over physical appearance, romance and rejection, loss and new beginnings change—or don’t change—from first love to the far reaches of life.

The Age of Love is a story of the universality of love and desire, regardless of age.

FULL SYNOPSIS
Born in the years before WWII, none of the 30 registrants for Rochester, NY’s first senior speed dating event dreamt of being flung into the high-tech social scene of the new millennium. But now, as posters go up, local media buzzes and anxious anticipation grows, these typically overlooked elders lay their hearts on the line, fearlessly confronting realities of physical appearance, romance and loneliness, loss and new beginnings.

An 82-year-old bodybuilding champ, bitterly divorced in his fifties, imagines someone new by his side; a skydiving widow dulls her loss by pursuing younger men; an online-dating addict searches the web for Mr. Right; a romantic discards his portable oxygen for a sunset tango on the beach; a 1940s movie fanatic who escaped an abusive marriage still seeks her ‘Fred and Ginger’ romance.

Faced with feelings “even our own kids never ask about,” each dater’s intimate confessions blend with revealing vérité to shed light on the unexpectedly intense and complex feelings that lurk behind wrinkled skin and thinning hair.

The event arrives, and our seniors, coiffed and polished, show up armed with ice-breakers and nervous attempts at humor. As the 5-minute ‘dates’ begin, they seek common ground in medical ailments, senior discounts and Big Band memories. Yet, beneath the hearty banter simmer ageless hopes and fears: Will they be harshly judged over looks and deficiencies? Will inner desires match real-world possibilities? And can they reach past old loves and losses and open up to a stranger once again?

But it’s only days later, as results envelopes are torn open by anxious hands, that the moment of truth arrives. And it’s suddenly clear how little changes in the realm of love—not awkward teenage anxieties, not the delight at being desired, and not the clumsy tears at rejection.

Finally, we go along on several first dates that lead to unexpected comedy and distress. One man can’t stop talking about his hospitalizations, a woman claims to be matched with the wrong date, and one couple, crammed in a cluttered kitchen, struggle to summon any small talk at all. But then we witness the first glimmer of a pairing that might evolve into a new and mature love.

Playful and wise, passionate and inspiring, these senior daters entertain and enlighten with a candor that puts media stereotypes to shame. Something’s clearly at stake in each of our characters’ lives—and we end by revisiting those who may not have found new soulmates, but who remain determined to grow and learn and try.
WISDOM FROM THE AGE OF LOVE’S SENIOR SPEED DATES

“Let’s face it, when you’re 25, jeez, you can throw yourself on the stairwell and do it...now it would hurt my back.” – Addie

“I got so much love to give to some woman, and it’s just sitting there getting stale. I still have that excitement, that feeling in my heart.” – Fran

“At this age, beauty is different. It’s not about wrinkles and plastic surgery, it’s about being open and adventurous.” – Frank

“My arms are wrinkled and flabby. Do I want them to be? No, but this is who I am, and I think it’s better just to be me.” – Linda

“In my generation, it was simple to ask a girl out. Now you have manuals, websites and therapists, but relationships don’t seem any better.” – Phil

“People still look for intimacy. I’ll admit it right out. I don’t mean to be obnoxious about it or anything, but yeah, that’s part of life.” – Matt

“I don’t think the feeling of love changes over time. It remains just as challenging and intense as when you were younger.” – Nancy
DIRECTOR’S STATEMENT

While the world’s fastest-growing age group is 65 and over, when we consider love and desire, our youth-obsessed media still embrace the clichés. Rarely in our culture are older adults given voice as emotionally intricate individuals.

My desire to explore this issue began when my dad’s death ended an intense half-century love affair, leaving my still-vibrant mother struggling to face a new life alone. That same year, a 78-year-old uncle who’d never even dated suddenly met a woman, and they fell madly, adolescently in love. Trying to understand the needs of those closest to me, I searched the media for stories where seniors spoke openly about their intimate, emotional lives, but found very few.

And so, when a ‘healthy aging’ coalition in Rochester, NY announced a speed dating event exclusively for 70- to 90-year-olds (at which many chuckled), it struck me as both iconoclastic and obvious. Here was a unique chance to discover how age affects our desire to start over, to be held once again in someone’s arms, to seek new companionship and affection. And so I set out with one question: Do decades of life and loss constrict our hearts, or might time develop them in unexpected ways?

Unlike other recent documentaries on aging, I saw an opportunity to break social and generational barriers by looking at seniors not in terms of specific talents or communities, but through shared, human desires. By telling a story involving a universal quest, I could connect older adults directly to the mainstream through situations to which all can relate. Regardless of age, I thought, who doesn’t understand loneliness, or intimacy, or the search for love?

Gaining exclusive rights to the dating event and its participants, I filmed without a crew, aiming to develop easygoing, personal relationships with the speed daters and allow candid stories to emerge by following their everyday routines. I listened both for humor and confessional poignance, and discovered a wide-ranging story by piecing together this ensemble of voices. In the end, I was amazed by how these outwardly unremarkable 70- to 90-year-olds, from the generation before baby boomers, opened up so willingly.

By attracting a wide audience with the humorous premise of ‘grandparents going speed dating’, THE AGE OF LOVE becomes a provocative entertainment that also addresses our society’s most insidious preconception of aging—that the emotional needs of anyone over 65 are similar and self-evident, limited to health and financial concerns and largely unrelated to those of younger generations.

On the contrary, as we watch these seniors navigate the comedy and drama of dating, their actions and emotions combine into something much deeper—revealing how the desire to love and be loved not only connects hearts of young and old, but, more unexpectedly, remains just as confounding, nerve-wracking and rewarding at any stage in life.

We’re all destined to age, and the aged were all once young. As an unmarried filmmaker somewhere in the middle, this project represents, in many ways, my own journey to understanding love and relationships. The key for me, and, hopefully for all audiences, is that this story lets us meet characters we thought we knew, but in their own space and in their own words, without assumption or judgment—introducing new voices to mainstream media that cannot be easily categorized or dismissed.
